31. Learn a TikTok dance. Share it if you want! (if you don't know what TikTok is, Google it!)
32. Plan a scavenger hunt around your home
33. Limit your news consumption
34. Take an online class – Coursera and Skillshare offer free online classes on subjects such as animation, creative writing, and philosophy.
35. Focus on what is in your control
36. Finally enjoy playing video games without feeling guilty.
37. Make playlists on your preferred streaming platform! Share them with your friends!
38. Have a virtual paint night with your friends
39. Start a gratitude journal – you can order one on Amazon, or make your own. Each day write down three things that you are grateful for and one positive self-affirmation
40. Create your own spa experience – get out the nail polish, the facemasks, and your favourite playlist. It's time to take care of you!
41. Learn how to play a new instrument – you can find free tutorials for almost anything on YouTube. The app 'Yousician' is also a cost-effective way to take online music lessons
42. Catch up on sleep
43. Brain dump – if you find that you're thinking too much, write down everything that's on your mind all at once. When you're done, you can save the page to look back on later, or you can throw it out.
